2016-17 Additional Capital Projects Bid

All bids have been returned and are under the projected budget.

The lowest bidder for the security camera project was disqualified, as they could not honor the price they submitted. The second lowest bid was selected.

The bleacher project bid for the Barrington High School includes all alternates and is well under the projected budget. It is recommended to accept the project with all alternates included.

Library planning – The design expenses have been billed to the project estimate. LeeAnn Taylor will keep an accounting spreadsheet for the project expenses at the request of Penny Kazmier.

Facility Committee will recommend the remaining “B” projects for Board approval. The 2016-17 capital projects will include The Hough Street School renovation, “A” projects and “B” projects. At the next Board of Education Meeting, the “B” projects will be recommended for approval.

The deadline for the RFQ to obtain architectural services for a district master plan s Friday May 6, 2016 at 2:00 p.m.

A proposal was discussed to renovate the Extended Self-Contained Program classroom. Amy Yurko, along with April Jordan and Linda Klobucher have come up with the plan. The design was based on the premise to have the classroom as open as possible and to have the walls work as hard as possible.

Greg Stahler added that all code requirements have been satisfied with the design.

The design could also be used as a concept classroom to replicate some of the designs for future classroom renovations.

Additional conversations will be had in the near future to secure funding before making a recommendation to the Board. Tom Campagna added that Buildings & Grounds could do some of the work in-house to save on the project costs. LeeAnn Taylor also added that her department could shoulder the finances for the monitors.

The next facilities meeting will be on Monday, May 9th at 4 p.m., in an effort to recommend a project scope and cost estimate / budget to the Board of Education for the enhancement of the Extended Self-Contained Program classroom at Hough Street School.

The meeting was adjourned at 5:31 p.m.
